Melodrama at the Park.

There are two good actresses at the Park in the play which opened a half-week's engagement at that theater yesterday. They are too good for the play, and each should have an important part in a drama of the better class. One is Ida Hamilton, a young woman who portrays the usual melodramatic heroine, and the other is Mrs. Charles Peters, a veteran actress who gives a most faithful picture of a bighearted old Irish woman. While the role played by Miss Hamilton is the conventional heroine of melodrama, the actress does not interpret it in the conventional way by any means. She plays it so earnestly, so convincingly and with such consummate art that the playgoer who is not accustomed to taking any of the cheaper melodramas seriously finds himself absorbed in this woman's acting and entirely forgetful of the crudities of the play itself. As for Mrs. Peters's characterization, it is just as complete in its way. The dear old would be hard to imagine her as any other person than the kind, lovable Cordelia

Donohue that she pretends to be.

The play is called "Her First False Step.

It is one of those curious jumbles of rural drama, musical comedy, sensational incidents, pathetic episodes and thrilling climaxes a play such as the dramatists for they are held by straight cuffs. the cheaper theaters delight in calling "stage stories of laughter and tears." Well the laughter is there, for there are several comic characters in the piece that provoke much merriment among the spectators. And, strange to say, the tears are there, too-not the tears that pour forth from overimpressionable auditors who are ever ready to weep at some mawkish attempt at pathos, but tears that are drawn to less susceptible eyes by the unusually strong acting of the unusually talented Miss Hamilton. The tears come in a death-bed scene. A scene of this description is usually overdone to such an extent in a melodrama that the thoughtful auditor can see only its absurd side. But in this case there is a real actress to carry the burden of it all. If a better piece of eme anal acting has ever been done at the Park Theater It has escaped the present writer's attention. Miss Hamilton does not rant; she does not wave her hands in the air and tear her hair when, in the character of a broken-hearted mother, she realizes that her baby is dead. Her emotion does not degenerate into hysteria, nor does she employ the old theatrical expedients. The mother's anguish rings true. There is so much bad acting to be seen at the Park that when a player does such work as this-and in spite of the character she plays rather than any inspiration to be gained from it-the innovation deserves more than passing notice. The audience cares little or nothing for bit of art, or if it is somewhat impressed, all remembrance of the scene is quickly scattered to the winds in the excirement of the sensations that follow. The dramatic thrills. There is the old story of the father turning his daughter from his play their good old accustomed part; there s an attempted murder; there is a "race for life" with the Brooklyn bridge as the scene-a favorite stamping ground for the melodrama writers-and there is a circus where the villain, after doing every other devilish act imaginable, throws a child into a cage of lions from which the little one is rescued by her mother. The play is, in fact, what the Park audiences call a "hummer" and it opened yesterday to two audiences that simply packed the treater from pit to dome.

There are other capable people in the cast besides Miss Hamilton and Mrs. Peters, but few of them are able to get away from a certain stereotyped form of acting, which has long been in vogue in the "popular price houses." Those worthy of special mention are Frederick Webber, John Sutherland and Charles H. Stewart, each one of whom plays his part with intelligence. There is a comic quartet which creates a good dial of amusement (one of the men in it is at least seven feet in height) and there are several pretty girls, including Amy Fanchonette, who brighten up things considerably with songs and dances whenever the opportunity offers. The play will continue at the Park the rest | limits, salaries at which appointments are of the week. It is sure to enjoy enormous

> The sale of seats for "The Frisky Mrs. Johnson," to be presented at English's next Monday and Tuesday nights, is now in progress at English's box office. The play, which is an adaptation by Clyde Fitch from the French of Gavault and Berr, deals with the adventures of a coterie of the gay American colony in Paris during carnival time. Mr. Fitch, in preparing the piece for the American stage, has made a great many changes in the original play, and has introduced a number of new and original scenes and effective stage "business." Miss Amelia Bingham is said to have a part that is admirably suited to her in the role of Mrs. Johnson, the gay American widow. As usual, her supporting company will be an river. exceptionally fine one.

Have Been Investigating Building Trades Strike There-Important Meeting Here Oct. S.

The headquarters of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners was enlivened yesterday by the arrival of the two chief executives, President William Huber and Secretary Frank Duffy, who have been in Philadelphia for the past two weeks. With them were D. A. Post, of Wilkesboro, Va., secretary of the general executive board, and T. M. Guerin, of Troy, N. Y., first vice president. The four representatives of the union have been investigating the strike that has existed in Philadelphia among the building trades since the first of May. It was a long and tedious task, as witnesses from both parties involved were placed upon the stand and forced to give testimony. No settlement was reached, but D. A. Post and T. M. Guerin were appointed to examine the testimony and hand down a decision in the case. That is the object of their trip to this city, as the evidence was sent here and will be gone over by the men in the offices of the national headquarters. It will probably take at least a week, as the strike in Philadelphia was one of the largest in the history of the carpenters' union. The decision is watched by the carpenters of the country

The quarterly meeting of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners will be held in this city the week beginning Oct. 12. Aside from the general routine of affairs nothing of special importance is expected to arise. The event that is attracting the greatest interest, however, is the convention of carpenters in this city on Oct. 8, at which the central legislative body of the organization, formed at a meeting in this city several weeks ago, will be permanently perfected. Representatives from all the carpenter unions in the country will be present and in all over 100,000 members will be represented. The movement of the carpenters to form a central body that shall be capable of legisiating their interests to the best advantage has caused much comment in the labor world. There are some who claim that it is a move against the American Federation of Labor. However, Secretary Duffy says such is not the case, but that they are acting for the betterment of their own interests and that in all probability Gaddy, Miss Emmer. the carpenters will keep their representation in the A. F. L. and the building trades council. He said further, relative to the central body, that everything was working out nicely and all the unions are much interested in the movement and have given it their hearty indorsement. Secretary Duffy yesterday issued his annual report, the main points of which were published in the Journal several days ago.

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary medical treatment. LETTER TO J. K. ENGLISH. Indianapolis, Ind. Dear Sir: There was a time when it paid a painter to paint lead and oil, and fight shy of anything else. That was when the market was full of poor paints, and zinc was unknown. Now zinc has come in, lead and oil must something. We've had 146 years of it. Yours truly, F. W. DEVOE & CO. P. S. Lilly & Stalnaker are Devoe agents,

Experience is worth
